

Miss Helen Gould is the only one of the women who says she doesn't want to be a deputy sheriff. She says she has troubles enough of her own.

Mrs. Young, wife of a millionaire banker, but better known as Mme. Nordica, the grand opera singer, has no doubt about accepting.

"Assuredly I shall accept," she said today. "It is only right that women should be given the opportunity to act as guardians of the peace."

Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont declared that she would be more than pleased to receive her commission. The only thing at which she would draw the line, she said, would be raiding gambling houses.

"I don't think women ought to be expected to do that. But there is plenty of other work for women deputies. The women, you see, don't want to oust the men; they want to work side by side with them, each doing his or her kind of work."

Mrs. James Lees Laidlaw, chairman of the borough of Manhattan for woman suffrage, said she would accept the "honor" of being a deputy, while Miss Inez Milholland, society leader, suffragette, law student—and herself arrested once at a suffragette meeting—said she was perfectly willing to serve.

The only difficulty that has arisen so far is just how the women are going to carry the traditional revolver of the deputy sheriff. When the question was put to some of the prospective deputies, they said vaguely that they "would find a way," but refused to speculate on possible solutions.

"One way to save money is to pare your apples and potatoes thin," says Uncle Hez. That's all right, Unk, but if you are too careful, you'll waste twice what the potatoes are worth in time. Has to be some happy medium.
